WORLD HEARS CRY FOR HELP

U.S. GIVES $100M TO BOOST HAITI RECOVERY AFTER QUAKE; RAVAGED INFRASTRUCTURE POSES OBSTACLE TO OUTSIDE HELP

Gladys Louis Jeune is pulled alive from the rubble of her home Thursday in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, nearly 43 hours after Tuesday's earthquake. AP PHOTO

Associated Press

Roads full of hungry, homeless people. A ruined port and an overwhelmed airport. Hundreds of crumpled buildings and little heavy machinery. Few working phones.

Relief supplies and emergency experts started pouring into Haiti from around the world Thursday, but aid groups said the challenge of helping Haiti's desperate quake survivors was enormous.

"It's chaos," U.N. humanitarian spokeswoman Elisabeth Byrs told The Associated Press. "It's a logistical nightmare."

Aid deliveries by ship were impossible to Port-au-Prince because the Haitian capital's port was closed due to severe damage from Tuesday's magnitude 7.0 earthquake. The city's airport was open but damaged, laboring mightily to handle a flurry of incoming aid flights.

Fearful of going near quake-damaged buildings, Haitians stood or rested on the roads, slowing the transport of food and other crucial aid.

Severe damage to at least eight Port-au-Prince hospitals made it nearly impossible to treat the thousands of injured or prevent outbreaks of disease, said Paul Garwood, spokesman for the World Health Organization.

Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, presents unique logistical challenges for aid workers even in the best of times. It shares an island with the Dominican Republic, meaning aid must arrive by sea or air. Haitian streets are in poor condition under normal circumstances, and even if aid reaches the Dominican Republic, the road from there to Port-au-Prince is narrow and easily clogged.

Almost everything has to be imported, even wood for building temporary shelters, because Haitians have denuded their hillsides by cutting trees for cooking fuel.

"If you see Dominican Republic and Haiti from the air, it's really striking," Byrs said. "Half of the island is green and the rest is dust."

In addition, Haiti was already heavily damaged by a series of severe hurricanes, the most recent in 2008.

President Obama announced Thursday the U.S. government was making an initial $100 million relief effort and promised an all-out rescue and humanitarian effort that included military and civilian emergency teams from across the U.S.

"We have to be there for them in their hour of need," Obama said.

The aircraft carrier USS Carl Vinson was deployed to Haiti, and the amphibious assault ship USS Bataan had been ordered to sail as soon as possible with a 2,000-member Marine unit.

Even as the United Nations stepped up its massive aid operation, the world body was trying to determine how many of its own staff were killed in earthquake.

"It's very difficult to give an exact number," said Byrs. "This is also a tragedy for the United Nations."

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

A senior White House adviser said Thursday that evangelist broadcaster Pat Robertson's remark that Haiti has been "cursed" doesn't express the spirit of the American people or the president.

Valerie Jarrett said on ABC's "Good Morning America" that Robertson's statement left her speechless and called it "a pretty stunning comment to make."

Robertson said Wednesday that Haiti has been "cursed" because of what he called a "pact with the devil" in its history. His spokesman said the comments were based on Voodoo rituals carried out before a slave rebellion against French colonists in 1791.

» U.S. officials say they've stopped all civilian flights from the United States to Haiti at the request of the Haitian government, because there is no room on the ground for more planes and not enough jet fuel for planes to go back.

» Some senators are trying to encourage charitable donations for Haitian earthquake victims by proposing a temporary increase in tax benefits for relief contributions. The changes would be similar to those enacted after Hurricane Katrina hit the Gulf Coast in 2005.

» President Obama has asked former Presidents George W. Bush and Bill Clinton to help with U.S. relief efforts in Haiti, an administration official says. The official spoke on the condition of anonymity because the announcement has not been made.

» A State Department official confirmed the first death of an American in quake-stunned Haiti, saying that at least 164 U.S. citizens have been evacuated since Tuesday's magnitude 7.0 temblor.

» TV news divisions raced to get into Haiti to report on the devastation wrought by a powerful earthquake. The broadcast networks' three top anchors—Katie Couric, Diane Sawyer and Brian Williams—all were dispatched to the country.

» Oprah Winfrey, Paris Hilton, Ben Stiller, Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie are among the celebrities and artists urging support for survivors of the earthquake in Haiti.

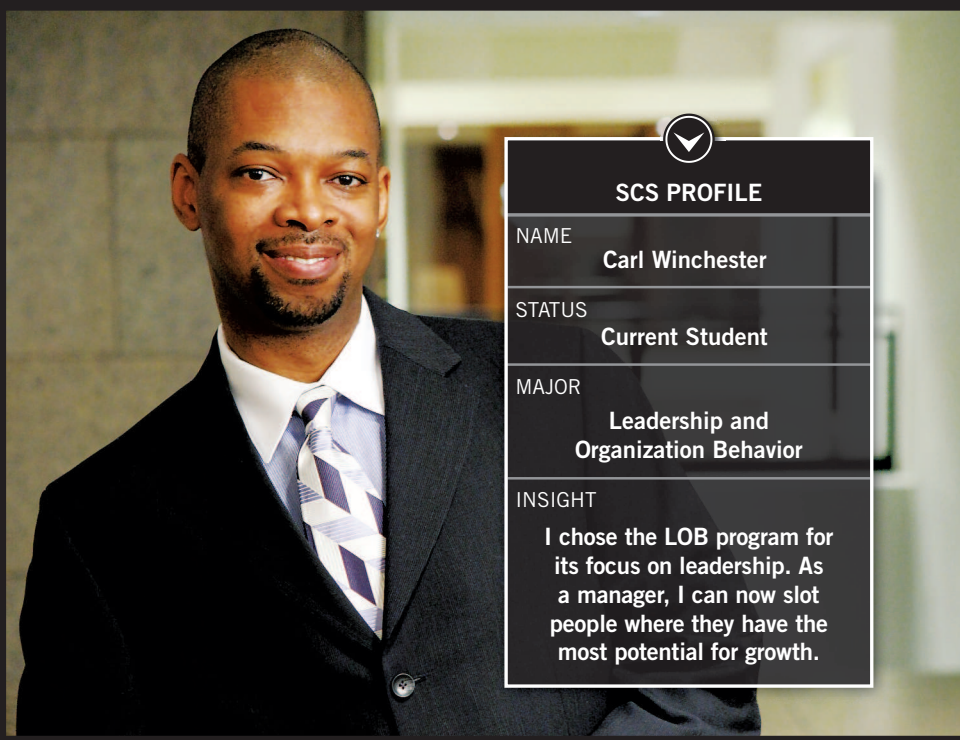

Doctors Without Borders announced Wednesday that Pitt and Jolie were contributing $1 million to the organization's emergency medical operations responding to the earthquake.

Bad week for race debate

Did a scientist unleash a scenario similar to "Flash Forward," except we flashed backward 50 years in race relations? That's my explanation for a time span I have dubbed National Racial Insult Week.

The week started with Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid apologizing for reducing President Obama's ascension to light skin and lack of discernible "Negro" dialect in a quote for an upcoming book.

On Monday morning, politico-turned-reality show star Rod Blagojevich said he was sorry for telling Esquire magazine he was "blacker" than Obama in the mag's February issue. If those two idiotic events don't inspire you to hum "We Shall Overcome," reminisce on these racial run-ins:

Rush to judgment

On Wednesday, Rush Limbaugh proved, once again, he should be broadcasting from a broom closet after making idiotic comments about Tuesday's earthquake in Haiti. Just one day after the natural disaster killed an estimated tens of thousands, Limbaugh took to the airwaves suggesting Obama is capitalizing on it as an opportunity to bring together the "light-skinned and dark-skinned [black] communities within this country."

Clearly, Limbaugh needs to grab a front seat in somebody's African-American studies class. Reid's foolish quip aside, blacks—no matter the societal stigma on skin shade—are not two separate communities that need to be united like East and West Germany. Limbaugh is only spared the distinction of dumbest statement related to the disaster because of the Rev. Pat Robertson, who asserts the earthquake is pay-back for Haitians who made a deal with the devil 200 years ago.

Bigots for Stroger?

What's white, black and bigoted all over? A campaign flier from Soldiers 4 Stroger on display at gapersblock.com and, apparently, circulating the streets of Chicago.

A group of race-baiters—including gang leader-turned-community activist Wallace "Gator" Bradley—created campaign material that manages to insult the Irish, blacks, Chicago voters, a brand of pancakes and the notion of common sense in one fell swoop. White political figures of the Democratic Party, including Mayor Daley, are identified as "massas," while black candidates who dare to "split" the "black vote" by opposing embattled Cook County Board President Todd Stroger are derided as slaves.

It is downright demeaning to see Circuit Court Clerk Dorothy Brown referred to as Kizzy from "Roots," and candidate Terrence O'Brien, who is white, crowned "Cracker Boy Bottom Feeder."

Stroger's camp released a statement saying his campaign does not endorse or condone such activities, but I'll take it a step further and command these so-called Soldiers to burn the remaining racist nonsense, particularly those citing Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

Then, let's save a little gasoline to torch this week from our minds. We can start fresh in time to honor MLK.

How to direct good intentions to help Haiti

Chicago Tribune

Pierre Romeus' heart is with Haiti, and not just because several of his relatives are still missing after this week's earthquake.

The Chicagoan wants to help his homeland, so he put out a call Thursday for people to bring canned goods to the South Side shopping center he runs. At the same time, he hadn't yet figured out how to get the stacks of food to the island.

"I've shipped things before to Haiti. I think I know how to do it," he said with a shrug.

The disaster in Haiti has unleashed a wave of goodwill in Chicago—college students donating via text message, fundraising drives at high schools and a contingent of nurses, some from Cook County, planning to personally transport bandages, gauze and medicine to Port-au-Prince on Saturday.

While one of the strengths of the response is that anyone with a Facebook page, fax machine or empty jar by the cash register can organize a relief effort, that also is one of the budding challenges.

Authorities have warned that Haiti remains a "logistical disaster," meaning that freelance philanthropy might get only so far. And sometimes well-intended efforts like shipping canned food or water can actually complicate rescue and relief missions if groups do not work together, according to Katherina Rosqueta, executive director for global health at the University of Pennsylvania's Center for High Impact Philanthropy.

"We don't want to dampen those good intentions," Rosqueta said. "But people need to make sure that they are staying informed and coordinating with folks on the ground. ... A can of food and a shirt is not what is needed at this stage."

During the first week following a disaster, Rosqueta said the best way for most people to help is by donating money to organizations that already have operations in Haiti such as the Red Cross and Doctors Without Borders, Rosqueta said.

"Money will give us the most flexibility," agreed Joan Lundgren, senior director at the Chicago office of CARE, which is also raising funds. "We've been in Haiti for 50 years. We have permanent staff there and we are able to hit the ground running."

Man freed after almost 25 years behind bars

Chicago Tribune

Freed Thursday after almost a quarter century behind bars, Michael Tillman said it "feels good," but he also had a prediction for the Chicago police detectives who allegedly tortured him into confessing.

"They'll get what they got coming," Tillman told reporters in the Cook County Criminal Courts Building. "The system will do to them what they did to me."

Tillman stood in borrowed clothes and nervously fidgeted with a black stocking cap as he addressed the news media moments after special prosecutors dropped charges against him for the 1986 slaying and rape of Betty Howard in an abandoned South Side apartment.

He is the latest longtime inmate to be freed because of allegations of torture by detectives under disgraced former Chicago Police Commander Jon Burge.

In court papers, special prosecutors brought in to handle the case said that if Tillman were retried, the state would be unable to disprove the confession had been coerced. And there wasn't enough other reliable evidence to convict him of the murder, they said.

The special prosecutors went on to acknowledge evidence of "a pattern and practice of abuse" at Area 2 police headquarters under Burge and his detectives—which Tillman's lawyers heralded as a first for the state.

"In 35 years—starting with Richard Daley, Richard Devine, Lisa Madigan—no prosecutor in charge of these cases has ever conceded that a man was tortured or abused at Area 2," attorney Flint Taylor, who has handled numerous Burge-related cases, said outside court.

A Madigan spokeswoman defended her office's handling of some of the Burge-related prosecutions, noting that six inmates have been freed in recent years after a careful analysis of their cases.

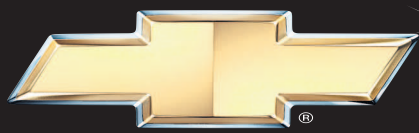

Howard, a single mother, had left for a birthday party for her 2-year-old son when they were abducted in their apartment building and taken to a vacant unit. The boy was locked in a nearby bathroom as his mother was tied to a radiator, sexually assaulted, stabbed and shot.

2nd CTA derailment since December leaves two injured

Chicago Tribune

Two passengers suffered minor injuries early Thursday when a CTA Red Line train derailed in the subway at the Roosevelt Road station.

Trains were rerouted to Loop elevated tracks for about 4 1/2 hours. Service in the subway resumed at 5:47 a.m. after the train was removed and the track inspected for any damage.

The northbound train with roughly 20 passengers was stopped near Roosevelt when it started moving again and hit a switch and derailed, officials said. CTA spokeswoman Noelle Gaffney could not confirm the cause.

The operator of the four-car train will not be driving one pending the conclusion of the investigation into the derailment, CTA officials said. They said the investigation will include drug testing, which is standard procedure.

At the time of the derailment, all trains were moving on a single southbound track because of maintenance work.

It was the second CTA derailment in little more than a month. Four CTA employees were fired after a Green Line train derailed Dec. 12 at the 59th Street junction when a stop signal was ignored. No one was seriously injured in that event.

At about 1:15 a.m. Thursday, the second of a train's four cars jumped up onto a walkway, just before the station's waiting area at the Roosevelt station, with the front and rear cars still on the tracks, according to officials. The cars, however, remained connected to one another, they said.

The two injured passengers, both men, were taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital for "bumps and bruises," officials said.

Chicago men indicted in Mumbai terror case

Chicago Tribune

Two Chicago men were indicted Thursday in connection with the November 2008 terror assault in Mumbai and a plot to attack a Danish newspaper.

The indictment formally links Tahawwur Rana to the Mumbai attacks for the first time. Rana's co-defendant, David Coleman Headley, was previously charged with helping to plan that attack. The charges alleged he traveled to India to scout out hotels, a bus station and other targets under the guise of traveling on behalf of Rana's immigration business.

Both were charged late last year with planning to attack the Jyllands-Posten newspaper in Copenhagen and kill an artist responsible for controversial cartoons of the Prophet Muhammad that enraged much of the Muslim world.

The new indictment charged Rana with providing material support in preparation for carrying out the Mumbai attack, which has been blamed on the Pakistani terrorist group Lashkar-e-Taiba.

The indictment alleged that Rana was told of Headley's trip to India in 2006 and that he gave Headley approval to travel there and open a Mumbai office of his First World Immigration as cover for his activities. Rana also allegedly directed the preparation of Headley's paperwork and advised Headley on getting a Visa.

Firefighters help people down a ladder as they evacuate an apartment building that was on fire Thursday at 6720 N. Sheridan Road. JONATHAN BULLINGTON/TRIBUNE PHOTO

Officials investigating fatal Rogers Park fire

Chicago Tribune

James Hendrickson smelled smoke in his Rogers Park apartment, heard people yelling and immediately called his mother who lived on the floor above him.

There was a fire in the building, she screamed, and she couldn't get out.

Hendrickson ran upstairs and tried to kick down his mother's door but couldn't. Then his mother's cell phone went dead.

"That's when I got scared."

With the smoke getting thicker, Hendrickson said he ran downstairs and, to his relief, saw his mother being escorted down a ladder by a firefighter.

While firefighters were able to rescue her and several other people, a man was found dead on the top floor of the five-story apartment building at 6720 N. Sheridan Road. Officials say they are investigating the blaze as suspicious because it began in a common hallway and spread quickly.

Five people were injured, including two firefighters and a man who jumped from his fifth-floor apartment.

Hector Argueta, who lives in a neighboring building, said he ran out to the gangway after being awakened by the fire and saw "an older guy" jump from the top floor.

The man fell to the ground and was immediately surrounded by fire personnel, who got him on a stretcher and into an ambulance, he said.

The fire began about 12:15 p.m., and firefighters immediately set up ladders against the front and back of the building to evacuate the upper floors, according to Chicago Fire Department spokesman Qution Curtis.

The fire spread from the fifth-floor hallway to an apartment, and was beginning to spread to the fourth floor, District Chief Patrick Malone said. The hallway—where the man was found dead—was engulfed in flames when fire crews responded.

Man, 20, fatally shot

A 20-year-old man was shot to death Wednesday evening in the South Chicago community, Chicago police said.

Anthony Coleman was shot outdoors on the 8300 block of South Buffalo Avenue about 6:20 p.m. Someone who knows Coleman heard gunfire and found him shot a short time later, said Officer Robert Perez, a police spokesman.

Coleman, 20, of the 8500 block of South Burley Avenue, was pronounced dead about an hour later at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Cop shoots fleeing suspect on Northwest Side

A Chicago police officer early Thursday shot a man who authorities said pointed a gun at the officer as he was chasing the suspect in connection with a nearby shooting.

No officers were hurt during the shooting, which took place about 12:45 a.m. on the 1900 block of North Karlov Avenue on the Northwest Side.

A Grand Central District officer was on patrol in the area of Armitage Avenue and Pulaski Road when he heard gunfire, police said in a statement.

Local soldier killed in Afghanistan

A 22-year-old soldier from Romeoville was killed Wednesday after driving over a 250-pound improvised explosive device in Afghanistan, his father said.

Kyle Wright, a 2006 graduate of Romeoville High School, was fluent in Arabic and was in love with his girlfriend, whom he met while based in Washington, said his father, Richard Wright. Kyle Wright joined the Army after graduating high school and was based at Fort Lewis, Wash. CHICAGO TRIBUNE

THE DIGIT

7 1 The Doomsday Clock, which reflects the direness of nuclear, climatological and technological threats, was moved back one minute to 11:54 on Thursday in New York, reflecting less threat of annihilation.

Associated Press

8 NEW YORK Months after the crash, Doreen Welsh had a panic attack when she inhaled a little water in the shower. Anastasia Sosa no longer finds swimming fun—it feels too much like survival training. And Jorge Morgado can't bring himself to get back on a plane.

A year after the 155 people aboard the crippled US Airways Flight 1549 survived a splash-landing on the frigid Hudson River, some are suffering the psychological aftereffects of their terrifying descent and harrowing evacuation.

While many have spoken of a newfound appreciation for life and a focus on family, some also are struggling to regain their balance emotionally.

"It was a real breaking point for me," said Sosa, who believed her husband and two young children would die with her.

In what became known as the Miracle on the Hudson, Capt. Chesley "Sully" Sullenberger deftly put his Airbus A320 down in the river on Jan. 15, 2009, after a collision with a flock of birds disabled the aircraft's engines.

On Friday, the anniversary, Sullenberger and some of the survivors will take a boat out to the place where they were pulled soaked and freezing from the water, and at the moment of impact they will raise their glasses in a toast.

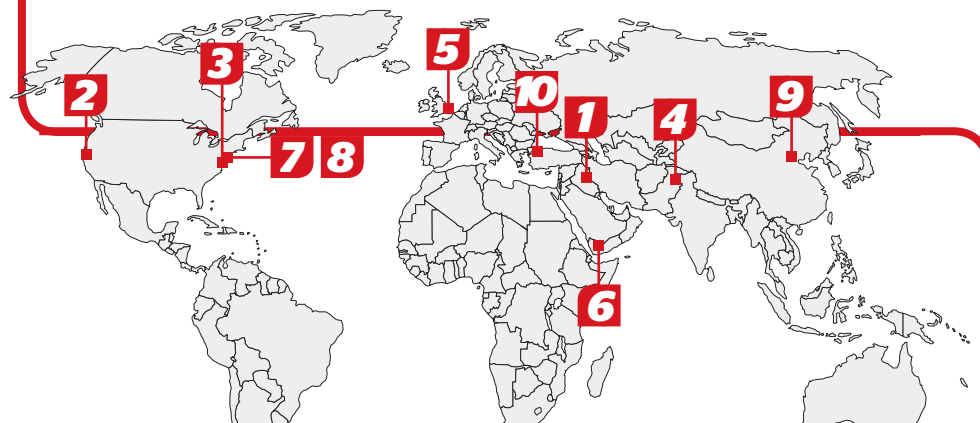

APPRECIATION FOR LIFE

Many survivors, including Mark Hood, speak mostly about the positive outlook they gained from their brush with death. In the past year, the Charlotte, N.C., salesman has spoken to more than 50 church and civic groups about the experience. "There is really, really nothing in life to fear," he said.

China digs in heels on Web laws

9 BEIJING In China's first official response to Google's threat to leave the country, the government Thursday said foreign Internet companies are welcome but must obey the law and gave no hint of a possible compromise over Web censorship.

Foreign ministry spokeswoman Jiang Yu, without mentioning Google by name, said Beijing prohibits e-mail hacking, another issue cited by the company. She was responding to questions about Google at a regular ministry briefing.

"China's Internet is open," Jiang said. "China welcomes international Internet enterprises to conduct business in China according to law."

Google Inc. said Tuesday it would stop censoring search results in China and might shut down its China-based google.cn site, citing attempts to break into accounts on its Gmail service used by human rights activists.

Jiang gave no indication whether the government had talked with Google. The state Xinhua News Agency earlier said officials were seeking more information about its announcement.

Bears run out of Fewell

Buffalo Bills interim coach Perry Fewell has been hired as the New York Giants' defensive coordinator.

Coach Tom Coughlin announced the move late Thursday evening after Fewell spent the past few days weighing offers from the Giants and the Bears.

"I am ecstatic to come to work for the New York Giants," Fewell said. "It's a good football team with good defensive players, and it is a franchise known for defense."

Fewell interviewed for the vacant Bills coaching job but he has said for a while that he felt he was a longshot for that position.

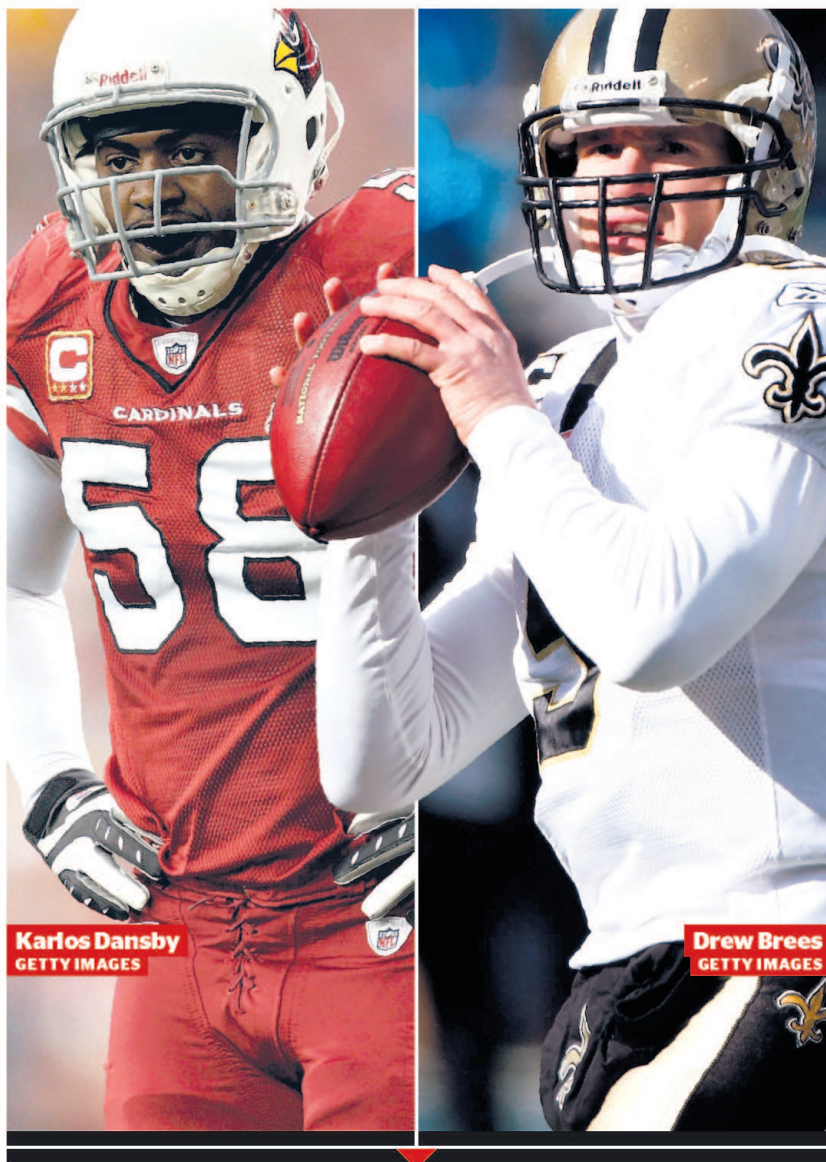

Fewell coached Chicago defensive backs in 2005, when the Bears led the NFC with 24 interceptions and cornerback Nathan Vasher and safety Mike Brown were selected to the Pro Bowl. It's one of the reasons Lovie Smith wanted him back as coordinator.

DIVISION SIGNS

As march to Super Bowl enters divisional round, Whizzer makes his picks

I come to you this week with my head down and my tail between my legs. You can't see me, but take my word for it. My co-workers are laughing at me. Last week, I was humbled, embarrassed you might say, going 1-for-4 in my wild-card predictions. This week I plan to rectify that by getting all these divisional playoffs picks right. If not, I just might have to turn in my crystal ball and this cool hat. Here now, my picks.

Karlos Dansby
GETTY IMAGES

Drew Brees
GETTY IMAGES

Arizona at New Orleans 3:30 p.m. Saturday, Fox

No matter what the over/under is for this game, trust me, take the over. The Cards D gave up 45 points last week to Green Bay, but Drew Brees and New Orleans have an even better offense than the Packers. Like Arizona, though, the Saints are terrible against the pass. There'll be more bombs in this game than NBC's prime-time lineup.

Whizzer's prediction: New Orleans 40, Arizona 33

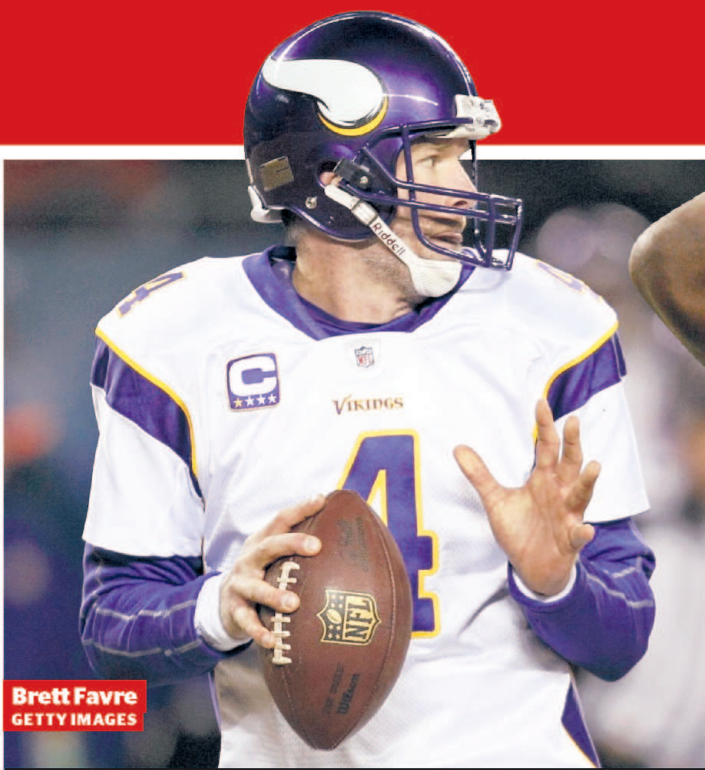

Peyton Manning
GETTY IMAGES

Ray Lewis
GETTY IMAGES

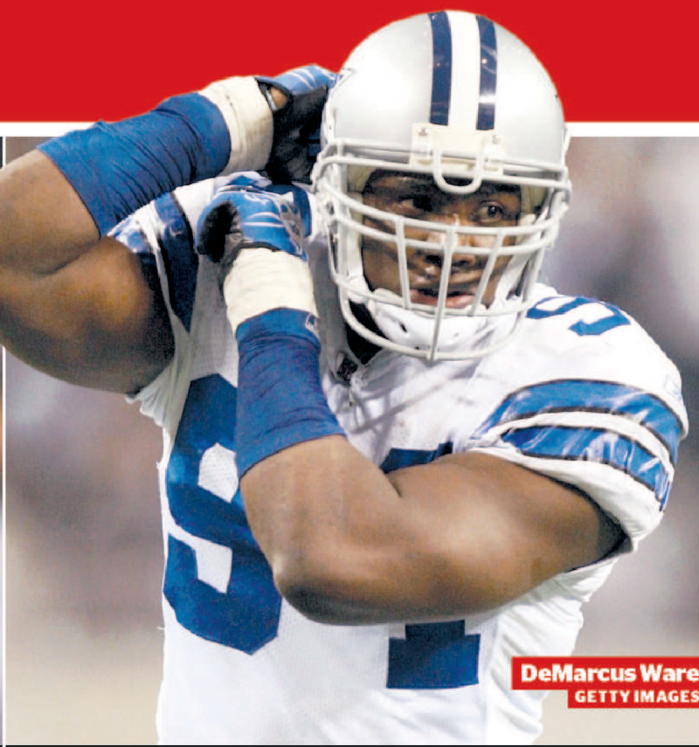

Baltimore at Indianapolis 7:15 p.m. Saturday, CBS

This game is the classic defense vs. offense showdown. Colts quarterback Peyton Manning is perhaps the smartest ever at his position, and he'll use his head—his monstrous forehead, I might add—to figure out the Ravens D on the fly, calling his trademark audibles so often he'll be sick of his own voice.

Whizzer's prediction: Indianapolis 27, Baltimore 23

Brett Favre
GETTY IMAGES

DeMarcus Ware
GETTY IMAGES

Dallas at Minnesota noon Sunday, Fox

If Brett Favre doesn't retire before this game, he might just wish he did. Dallas' DeMarcus Ware is a sack machine—don't be jealous, Bag Boy—and Favre's, ahem, veteran legs will be tested. He'll probably eat turf a few times too. Good thing for Favre he has Adrian Peterson to hand off to. That might take the pressure off.

Whizzer's prediction: Minnesota 28, Dallas 24

Philip Rivers
GETTY IMAGES

Darrelle Revis
GETTY IMAGES

N.Y. Jets at San Diego 3:40 p.m. Sunday, CBS

The Chargers are the fad Super Bowl pick, kind of like "Jersey Shore" is the fad reality show of the moment. They've earned it, though. The Chargers, not "Jersey Shore," that is. Philip Rivers leads a top-five passing offense, but it'll be tested by Jets cornerback Darrelle Revis, who has shut down big names like Terrell Owens, Randy Moss and Chad Ochocinco. Shutting them down was impressive; shutting them up would have been heavenly.

Whizzer's prediction: San Diego 31, N.Y. Jets 19

A-listers avoiding Bears

Oh, please, no one wants to coach here.

That's my assessment of the Bears' coordinators search. Before it even started, we were out of the running for the top guys we wanted—Jeremy Bates and Tom Clements. Thanks, Green Bay, you've beaten us yet again. So we're left with Mike Tice (yawn) and Ken Zampese, who has never called plays in the NFL. You know what, let's just get Mike Martz in here and see what happens—it can only make the looney bin more fun to watch. As for the defensive side, just hire Perry Fewell before the Giants take him away. Oops, too late for that too.

Here's a quick update, Chicago: No one is dying to come here. The Bears are second-rate, both in ownership and players. If you think they'll be lining up to come here and save this town, think again.

That's what DePaul is going to find out. There's like 16 teams in the Big East right now, and DePaul ranks somewhere in the teens.

I'm not sure how I would pitch this job, but here goes: We play in a cool city, aside from weather and traffic. We were really good back in the day—like, Magic Johnson and Larry Bird's day. We play in a great conference, but we can't and won't compete with Louisville, Memphis, UConn, Villanova and others. About the only thing we can offer here is cash.

Good luck with that.

I see Northwestern is sizing up Wrigley Field for a potential game there in 2010. Wow. Quick note to the Bears: THAT SHOULD BE YOU. You used to play there! It's part of your heritage. Play a game there once a year, make it against Green Bay, and make it awesome. Play it at night, even. People will love it.

People will not love Sammy Sosa again, probably ever. For those of you waiting for him to step up and confess like Mark McGwire ... keep waiting. I doubt his over-size head would see the benefits in doing so.

1 Brett Favre says he envisions Minnesota winning this weekend. What do you envision?	Bengay, a broken hip and a set of misplaced dentures. And that's just the pregame warm-up.	A Viking funeral. They can join the Bears in being flushed out to sea.	A moratorium on Dwayne Johnson comedies.	Me and "The Situation" bouncing quarters off our abs at Lumen tonight.	Brett Favre playing for every NFL team by the end of next season.
2 The Bears have interviewed so many coaches Conan O'Brien is just three rejections away from getting a call.	... they're going to get flagged on Craigslist for spreading viruses.	... John Shoop is waiting by his phone.	... it's just dirty. Bears, get some self-respect, do these coaches even like you? that they have begun visiting Chicago day cares in hopes of finding replacements.
3 What advice would you give the Blackhawks before their eight-game road trip?	When you yell "shotgun" before boarding the bus, be sure Gilbert Arenas isn't around.	Play the license plate game: Guess how many plates were made by Illinois governors.	Loan Patrick Kane some money to tip the skyscap.	Score early, conquer the next one. My bedroom manifesto.	Don't forget to pack your Snuggie.
4 What event would you like to see during the Cubs Convention?	Cubs answer questions about World Series traditions that don't involve them watching on TV.	A punvention to see how many Cubs flubs puns people can devise.	Carlos Zambrano attempting crunches.	An elephant walk with the starting lineup.	A dunk tank featuring Milton Bradley and a tank full of sharks.
5 The Washington Wizards are in town. Insert your Gilbert Arenas joke here.	The United Center should add "Janie's Got a Gun" to its playlist and let fans fill in Gilbert's name.	No, thank you. I'd rather not insert Arenas anywhere.	Can't help you there. I'm a bit gunshy.	Hey Gilbert, is that a pistol in your pocket, or does losing millions get you excited?	Hey! This isn't a baseball card, it's Gilbert Arenas holding a gun to the commissioner's head.

Bulls take high road

BOSTON Luol Deng scored 25 points and the Bulls won their third straight game with a 96-83 victory over the Boston Celtics on Thursday night.

The Celtics, whose only lead was 2-0, trailed 86-80 after Paul Pierce hit a 3-pointer with 3:50 left. But the Bulls scored eight of the next nine, six by Joakim Noah, to build the lead to 94-81.

Noah added 15 points and 11 rebounds for the Bulls, who led from 4-2 onward.

The Bulls began a stretch of 10 of 12 road games with the rare road victory, taking advantage of a Celtics team playing without Kevin Garnett and Rasheed Wallace.

Pierce scored 20 points and Rajon Rondo added 15 for the Celtics, playing their fourth game in five nights. The loss dropped them to 11-6 at home after they went 35-6 there in each of the past two seasons.

The Bulls won for only the second time in their last 12 road games.

THE REVOLUTION IS NEAR

See what's brewing inside Logan Square's Revolution

By Lisa Arnett

In 2008 it was Metropolitan Brewing; 2009 brought Half Acre. This year, Chicago beer gains even more speed with the opening of Revolution Brewing in Logan Square.

But unlike its recent predecessors, Revolution's also a brewpub where you can chow down on fresh-baked pizzas and house-smoked meat sandwiches with your freshly poured pints, all christened with feisty names that'll make you want to throw up your fist in solidarity.

Behind the movement to bring a brewery back to Logan Square is Josh Deth (pictured right), who scrubbed brewery tanks at Golden Prairie, the last brewery to operate in the neighborhood, in the mid-'90s. Working alongside him as brewer is Jim Cibak, a former brewer at Three Floyds and other craft breweries whom Deth met while working at Goose Island's Fulton Street brewing facility in the late '90s.

Revolution aims to open later this month. Stay tuned to metromix.com for updates.

LISA ARNETT IS THE METROMIX NIGHTLIFE AND SHOPPING PRODUCER. LMARNETT@TRIBUNE.COM
BARRY BRECHEISEN PHOTOS FOR METROMIX

8 The number of house brews owner Josh Deth hopes to have on tap when the brewery's running at full-speed. Expect at least five beers available when Revolution opens, including Iron Fist pale ale, Cross of Gold blonde ale, the orange- and coriander-flavored Bottom Up white ale and Workingman Mild, which Deth calls a "lunch beer." "You can drink a couple of them and it doesn't blow you over," he says.

$3M The estimated cost of the Revolution Brewing project, which included an elaborate gut rehab to make the building brewery-ready.

10 The number of years ago Deth dreamed up the name and logo for his potential future brewery. Needless to say, it stuck. "It means a lot of things to different people. Revolution is a state of change and upheaval and overthrow, and it happens all the time in different places. Sometimes you don't even know it's happening before it's over."

101 Age of the building housing Revolution. Peacock Publishing, a neighborhood newspaper company, operated here during its early years, according to Deth's research.

2007 The year Deth started blogging about his brewery project on revbrew.com.

$4 What it'll cost you to try the bacon-fat popcorn with fried sage and shaved parmesan, which Deth recommends as a must-try on the food menu if you order only one thing.

6,250 The approximate square footage of the building's second floor, which will eventually be built out to host private parties.

7% The estimated alcohol content in Eugene, Revolution's first seasonal brew. This strong, chocolatey porter is named after Eugene Debs, the leader of Chicago's Pullman Strike in 1894.

18 The approximate age at which Deth brewed his first batch of home-brewed beer using a cast-off kit from his college roommate's brother. "I owe him," Deth says. That roommate's brother, Jason Petrie, is now employed at Revolution as chef after spending time in the kitchen at Handlebar, which Deth also owns.

4 The number of fist-shaped columns built into the back bar.

30 The number of lights hanging from the ceiling crafted from Goose Island Bourbon County Stout barrels, which are also used to decorate the walls around the brewpub.

'SHORE' THING

MTV crew hitting up Chicago's nightclub circuit this weekend

By Leonor Vivanco
REDEYE

"Everybody loves me: babies, dogs, hot girls, cougars. I just have unbelievable mass appeal."

MIKE "THE SITUATION" SORRENTINO ON MTV'S 'JERSEY SHORE'

He's right. "The Situation" and the rest of the gang from "Jersey Shore" have captivated the nation with their laughable one-liners and shameless antics of partying, punching and picking up dates.

On Friday, three of them are invading Chicago's night life scene with appearances at clubs in West Town and River North. Fresh off the late-night talk show circuit, Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi is slated to appear at Manor (642 N. Clark St.) while Pauly Delvecchio and Sorrentino are headed to Lumen (839 W. Fulton Market).

There's no question they and the rest of "Jersey Shore" cast members will be back in Chicago on Feb. 19 at Joe's Bar (940 W. Weed St.).

"They are the hottest ticket in Chicago or in the U.S.A. right now," event planner Katelyn Lobascio said.

She said the bar has been bombarded with phone calls and e-mails and has gotten a ton of hits on its Web site and Facebook fan page since organizers announced the appearance. "We've never had this much interest in something we've done," she said. Scheduled to appear are Mike "The Situation," "J-Woww" and Pauly D., who will be spinning. There also will be glow sticks, foggers, and VIP and bottle service.

"It's kind of like the ideal situation to have them come to the bar because that's what you watch them do all the time," Lobascio said. LV, REDEYE

SAY WHA?

The cast members of MTV's "Jersey Shore" are known for their one-liners. Check out the best fist-pumpin' quotes from the show so far.

"My ultimate dream is to move to Jersey, find a nice juiced hot tan guy and live my life."

SNOOKI

"It's not a matter of if she wants to hook up with me, it's a matter of when I decide."

THE SITUATION

"I don't freakin' eat lobster or anything like that because they're alive when you kill it."

SNOOKI

"My hair is windproof, waterproof, soccer-proof, motorcycle-proof."

PAULY D

"I'm going to [bleep] knock a bitch up."

SAMMI

"I'm like a praying mantis. After I have sex with a guy, I will rip their heads off."

J-WOWW

the cast—Jenni "J-Woww" Farley, Sammi "Sweetheart" Giancola, Ronnie Magro and Vinny Guadagnino—have become pop culture juggernauts, splashed on magazine pages and paid up to $7,500 for club appearances as reported by eonline.com.

Manor and Lumen declined to comment on what, if anything, they were paying the "Jersey" boys and girl. A rep for the club did say, however, that Lumen's phones are ringing off the hook with callers asking about the event and begging to meet the cast.

"It's like a cult, a 'Jersey Shore' cult," said marketing and event director Alison Richmond.

The MTV guilty pleasure on which they all star has racked up a steady fan base—an average of nearly 3.3 million live and same-day viewers tuned in for last week's episode (its highest), up from the season premiere that averaged 1.3 million viewers, according to The Nielsen Company, which measures ratings.

That means "Jersey Shore" had more viewers than the most-watched episode of "The Hills" this past season. But it's nowhere near, say, the 29.9 estimated viewers who tuned in for this season's "American Idol" premiere Tuesday, The Nielsen Company said.

Why are we so obsessed with "Jersey Shore?"

"I like a lot of reality TV, but these people are beyond-belief awesome from the point of view that it makes me feel good about myself," said Danny Ashare, 26, a media planner who lives in Lakeview. "It's like a better version of 'The Real World,' you know?"

The cast of seven tanned party animals is notorious for fighting, fist pumping on the dance floor, and using the F-words: "freakin'" and, of course, the F-bomb. (There originally were eight roommates, but one got kicked off.) On Thursdays at 9 p.m., the cast spews hilarious one-liners such as this particularly memorable quip from Angelina Pivarnick, who got booted because she refused to work at the T-shirt shop near the cast's shared beach house: "I'm a bartender. I do, like, great things."

Michael Niederman, chairman of the TV department at Columbia College Chicago, calls it "a simple freak show fascination."

"How far will they go? Ultimately, the bottom line to all of it is boy, doesn't this make me feel better about my life," he said.

Fans are definitely vibin' the show despite the controversy surrounding it.

UNICO, an Italian-American service organization, is outraged over the cast members calling themselves "guidos" and "guidettes," ethnic slurs some find offensive and derogatory. The group also opposes what it says is the show's promotion of violence and stereotypes of Italian Americans. Even though Dell and Domino's pulled advertising from the show, MTV hasn't bowed down to the pressure to cancel. The network did, however, black out part of an episode in which a man punched Snooki in the face.

Danielle Harris, 28, of Roseland, said she can understand why people would be offended by the show.

"They're young, obnoxious people who drink all the time, and I don't think that's fair to the Italian community," said Harris, a student and retail assistant manager. She said she's grown tired of people being famous not because they possess any talent. "People get rewarded for being ignorant," she said.

But all the controversy hasn't negatively affected the popularity of the "Jersey Shore"—just the opposite, said Robert Thompson, director of the Bleier Center for Television and Popular Culture at Syracuse University.

"The things the show is being accused of—being politically incorrect, being crude and being offensive—that's what this show is about," he said.

Just because the cast is saying offensive things or behaving badly doesn't mean viewers are insensitive or condone it, Thompson said. Viewers are watching because the stories are compelling and the show gives them a feeling of superiority, he said.

"By all rational measures, this stuff is really stupid, but it's such masterpiece stupidity," he said.

Even though each episode is essentially the same—often starting out with the cast members sipping on a alcohol-infused concoction called Ron-Ron Juice before leaving the house for a night of debauchery—viewers can't seem to get enough.

"It's funny how they think they're all good looking but they're not," said Melissa Hernandez, 28, a legal secretary who lives in West Lawn. "The fights they get into are hilarious."

What the show has going for it is shock value and comic relief, viewers said.

"It's trashy TV and I think everybody likes a little trashy TV," Ashare said.

As "The Situation" would—er, actually, did—say: "You can hate on me all you want to, but what can you possibly say to someone who looks like Rambo pretty much with his shirt off?" LIVANCO@TRIBUNE.COM

YOUTH IN REVOLT »

@SamsHere Youth in Revolt was witty and smart. Better than the previews lead on.

@jlabove "youth" was cera playing cera. amazing how he has found so many films demanding lanky and angsty boys, still, entertaining.

AVATAR

@straightgangsta My eyes were lucky enough to see Avatar this week-end. The 3-D was amazing. The effects where sick. Great movie. Watch it.

@JayRay Avatar was the first functional 3D experience that left me in awe... James Cameron is still not a great director.

@JesseMenendez

Day Breakers did what Vampires do, it sucked. Bad plot lines and poor effects killed this movie. No garlic needed.

@Cubsua Leap Year is funny, romantic, and leaves you dreaming of a magical trip to Ireland where dreams come true.

■■■■ 'Floored'

■■■■ The Chicago Board of Trade, the birthplace of the futures and options industry, used to revolve around a swarm of traders in the pit—yelling and using hand signals to make high-risk deals as quickly and competitively as possible. These days most trades are done on the computer, a change this documentary looks at from the perspective of those who find it efficient as well as from veteran traders who feel alienated.

The verdict: Technology replacing primal shouting signals a compelling end of old-school culture, where cigar-smoking hotshots lived a rock star lifestyle with more money than they knew what to do with. Veteran trader and hunter Mike Walsh sure epitomizes the thrill. At only 74 minutes, the movie leaves a lot of questions unanswered about the development and implementation of online trading and what it says that such an outrageously high percentage of traders are men.

■■■■ 'The White Ribbon' R

■■■■ Mysterious accidents suggest a terrifying pattern of violent revenge in a pre-WWI Protestant German village. No one can tell if the culprit is tied to the local baron, doctor, pastor, farmers or otherwise. Count on the deduction being considerably more chilling than a game of "Clue."

The verdict: With more complex urgency than "There Will Be Blood," "The White Ribbon" examines the foundations of conflict as the distance between suspicion and tragedy grows ever smaller. The persistent ambiguity is a bit of a cheat, and the pacing is so deliberate that your anxiety sometimes slips into impatience. But cruelty and paranoia breathe down the neck of this nail-biter, which creates biblical horror out of peace disturbed.

ALSO OUT FRIDAY

■■■■ 'The Lovely Bones'

Worse than the adaptation of "My Sister's Keeper" and as bad as the film "The Time Traveler's Wife."

■■■■ 'The Missing Person'

A nicely done take on innocence lost and life interrupted emerges.

■■■■ 'A Town Called Panic'

There are no jokes or distinct personalities here, and nothing other than odd nonsense.

■■■■ 'The Spy Next Door'

This corny action comedy isn't just lame on the Jackie Chan scale. It's lame on the George Lopez scale. And that's bad.

Washington a revelation in 'Book of Eli'

Los Angeles Times

For a guy who's just seen the end of the world, Denzel Washington is surprisingly upbeat.

The actor projects a studied, scowling quiet for much of his new post-Armageddon thriller "The Book of Eli," which makes it a little jarring to meet the actor and find him in an altogether different mode: gregarious, charismatic, Denzel-ish. As he talks about his new role, he stages a charm offensive—a unique Denzel campaign designed to melt anything in his path.

He jokes about razzing one of the film's directors, an atheist who's making a movie with religious themes. He indulges an overly excited stranger who stops by the table to gush about a house she once helped Washington's mother rent. And then he segues into a story about how his mother offered suggestions to Donald Trump on how to handle his business as Trump gave them a ride on his jet from Florida to New York.

"You know how New York mothers are. She takes charge. I said 'Ma, it's his plane, be quiet,'" he says, giving that trademark Denzel laugh.

Washington doesn't look like a man out to save mankind. But that's pretty much what he's doing in this apocalyptic, Bible-flavored Western—think "The Road Warrior" meets "The Road" with a touch of Billy Graham.

Washington's titular character wanders through a war-ravaged Earth, protecting the last extant copy of the Bible from a sadistic warlord named Carnegie (Gary Oldman). As the cat-and-mouse game unfolds, Washington's trademark magnetism is almost entirely absent, replaced by a sullen misanthropy.

"You have Denzel doing something in this movie he doesn't do much—not talking," says co-director Allen Hughes, who with Albert is the Detroit-born team known as the Hughes brothers (and the non-atheist).

There's a decidedly different tint to this role. It's not just in the dialed-down charisma but the essence of the character who, instead of fighting for secular humanist justice (a Denzel specialty) uses religion and scripture as a weapon.

That the actor is a self-professed Christian gives the role a life-imitating-art feel. While the movie's religious message is ambiguous—is the use of the Bible as a key plot object meant to show its sanctity or simply that it can be exploited?—"Eli" represents a rare chance for Washington. It's one of the actor's first parts in which he gets the frequent opportunity to quote and even improvise lines from the Bible, like the one from Corinthians that "we walk by faith, not by sight," which he added because a pastor he likes uses it.

Washington's presence, in turn, helped get the Hugheses—who return with their first feature in nine years—over the religion hump. "Denzel was the only guy who could solve the problem," Allen Hughes says. "There are a lot of Bible quotations, and there's a certain nobility that comes with him that mitigates that."

King of comedy

By Kyra Kyles | REDEYE

Chicagoans, prepare to be amused. Cedric "The Entertainer" will be in town Saturday performing his stand-up at the Arie Crown Theater. RedEye caught up with one of the Original Kings of Comedy to get a preview of his potential punch-lines, and to find out about upcoming projects starring the TV, film and comedy star. Get even more intel at redeyechicago.com/

Cedric 'The Entertainer'

When: 8 p.m. Saturday

Where: Arie Crown Theater,
2301 S. Lake Shore Drive

Tickets: $45 to $75 at ticketmaster.com, 312-559-1212

What are your favorite stops in Chicago?

When I came to do "Barbershop [2]," I did start to enjoy that whole Rush Street area ... I liked walking the street, part of that whole [Magnificent] Mile experience. I also liked being down on the South Side by the lake, near all the museums.

Are there any targets that you are just going to have to hit in your show?

[Laughs.] Tiger Woods is getting walloped, getting beat down. I'm going to have to hit him myself. The Republican Party, I always beat up on them, so much mess ... And the underwear bomber ... This boy had a bomb in his drawers. The one thing black people never had to worry about was black people being terrorists and here you go. And on Jesus' birthday trying to blow up plane in Detroit? But as soon as they said Detroit, I knew that it was a brother. Only one white man in Detroit and that's Eminem and he don't count.

What do you have planned after the tour?

Well, we just announced a situational comedy for ABC. The show would be in the fall of 2010 if it's picked up.

What's it about?

I play an ex-baseball player, retired and I have a radio show and I'm a little Charles Barkley-esque, you know, telling it like it is. I have an estranged son, 22 or 23, that I basically have just been sending checks to and now we're coming into each other's lives.

Any plans to try a talk show again like fellow comic Mo'Nique?

That's kind of a crowded space with Jimmy Fallon, George Lopez and [Jimmy] Kimmel, so many folks. I've had some talks about it, but really stepped away from it at this point.

I have an idea. How about "Dancing with the Stars?" If anyone's seen your Super Bowl spots for Bud Light, they know you can move.

[Laughs.] That's funny you say that because I have a big joke about "Dancing with the Stars." I hadn't thought about it, not sincerely, but I like to watch. I don't know if I feel that reality show energy.

Not to end on a sad note, but you're coming to the hometown of one of your fellow "Original Kings of Comedy," the late, great Bernie Mac. What do you think his legacy to comedy is?

What Bernie left behind was that you need to walk your own path. He was a man's man and he meant it like he said it and said it like he meant it. We have a lot of this talking stuff to people with a text, talking behind people's backs on a blog. But Bernie was the type who said [breaking into impressive Mac impression], "Say it to my face."

Secrets kept in '24'

Katee Sackhoff agrees that it wouldn't be a spoiler to reveal her new "24" character, Dana Walsh, has secrets.

"Everyone keeps going, 'Are you bad?'" Sackhoff told me this week from L.A. "And I'm like, 'Well guys, it's "24." It's not like her secret is going to be that she raised show ponies in Kentucky.'"

Although that would be a sweet twist for TV's most action-packed, kill-heavy series.

As with her former series, "Battlestar Galactica," Sackhoff can't give too many details about Season 8 of "24" or Walsh, a security analyst who is engaged to CTU agent Cole Ortiz (Freddie Prinze Jr.) and supervising Chloe O'Brien (Mary Lynn Rajskub). But she could confirm one detail: CTU, the intelligence unit that has employed Jack Bauer (Kiefer Sutherland) for the better part of seven seasons, has the worst employee screening ever.

"I've always wondered that, like how there's always a mole in CTU or the FBI," Sackhoff said. "You'd think that they'd be a little bit more careful, especially since it's happened so much in the past."

Sackhoff talks more about "24," her "Galactica" character Starbuck and riding motorcycles at redeyechicago.com/showpatrol.

'Sanctuary' goes Bollywood

"Sanctuary" closes its second season Friday, and according to Amanda Tapping and Robin Dunne, it's going to be huge.

"I think, honestly, it is the best two hours of television the 'Sanctuary' team has ever done," Tapping told me. "We have a Bollywood dance number. It's just crazy." The two-part "Kali" airs at 8 p.m. Friday on Syfy.

The "A-Team" movie stars Bradley Cooper, from left, as Templeton "Faceman" Peck, Quinton "Rampage" Jackson as B.A. Baracus, Sharlto Copley as H.M. "Howling Mad" Murdock and Liam Neeson as Col. John "Hannibal" Smith. 20TH CENTURY FOX

New 'A-Team' A-Z

Los Angeles Times

The new trailer for Fox's big-budget screen adaptation of "The A-Team" (due in theaters June 11) makes a point to hit the familiar touchstones of the cheese-tacular '80s action-comedy TV series.

Liam Neeson's character, Col. John "Hannibal" Smith, leader of the fun-loving crew of mercenary brigands, utters the late George Peppard's signature line from the show: "I love it when a plan comes together!" And Bradley Cooper (in the playboy role of Lt. Templeton "Faceman" Peck made famous by Dirk Benedict) looks at former UFC champion Quinton "Rampage" Jackson's B.A. Baracus character (Mr. T's scowling creation) and remarks, "You look like you have a real bad attitude."

But on the movie's Vancouver set last month, writer-director Joe Carnahan ("Smokin' Aces," "Narc") said the new film is not a by-the-book for crimes they didn't commit.

2 Mr. T

3 Peppard

"I'm not interested in making the easy, breezy Cover Girl version of 'The A-Team,'" Carnahan said.

Gone are B.A.'s thick coil of gold necklaces rendering of the series. Where the original Alpha Unit was a squad of disgraced Vietnam war vets, the new team is made up of covert operatives who ran missions during the most recent Iraq war and get hung out to dry and habit of exclaiming "I pity the fool!" In character on-set, however, Jackson conspicuously sported temporary tattoos across his knuckles that read "P-I-TY" and "F-O-O-L."

Sharlto Copley's "Howling Mad" Murdock (originally played by Dwight Schultz) also has been updated for modern audiences.

"Murdock for what passed as crazy 25 years ago? It doesn't hold up," the director said. "Nowadays, you have Steve-O on 'Jackass' strapping on a G-string made out of chicken parts and rappelling over an alligator pit. So you have to re-evaluate things like 'crazy.'"

But the cheesy black van with the red stripes is still there. Whew.

HOT DATE

Jan. 22

That's when MTV and George Clooney will team up to present a telethon to rally support and raise money for quake-ravaged Haiti. The telethon will appear on all MTV Networks channels.

Is it a 'Show' stopper?

Conan O'Brien's rep is shooting down a report that his last night as host of "The Tonight Show" will be Jan. 22. "Not true," his rep tells usmagazine.com. "He has a scheduled hiatus the week of Jan. 25." Meanwhile, NBC insiders tell the Hollywood Reporter that a TMZ report claiming that Jay Leno has made a deal to return to "The Tonight Show" is not true.

Juggernaut rolls on Planning to check out "Avatar" for the fourth time this weekend? Well, you will be pleased to hear that director James Cameron tells Entertainment Weekly he's planning a sequel to his billion-dollar blockbuster. "I've had a storyline in mind from the start—there are even scenes in 'Avatar' that I kept in because they lead to the sequel," he says.

Pantslanta!

"American Idol" has its new William Hung. Larry Platt, who performed his decidedly original work "Pants on the Ground" during Wednesday's broadcast of the Atlanta auditions, will appear on "The View" on Monday. Platt told the Atlanta Journal-Constitution on Thursday that he liked his quirky appearance on "Idol." "It played real, real good," said Platt, 63.

Tim's take

Tim Gunn's latest "Project Runway" catchphrase: "This worries me." He tells people.com: "There isn't a single challenge without lots of 'Make it work' moments. I'm afraid ['This worries me'] is going to become a catchphrase because I say it so frequently." Gunn says this season's designers seem to waltz around the workroom as though they have plenty of time to make their garments by the deadline.
